Zenato

In the heart of the Lugana area on the southern shores of Lake Garda, the winery was established in 1960, when the late Sergio Zenato and his wife Carla started to create quality wines from the local grape variety Trebbiano di Lugana. The Zenato winery now owns 75 hectares in total, 40 in San Benedetto di Lugana and 35 hectares in Sant'Ambrogio, in the Valpolicella Classico area.

The Zenato name is synonymous with Amarone and they have continuously produced Amarone and Amarone Riserva of immense complexity and depth, to international acclaim.

As well as Amarone, Zenato produce other wines typical of the region such as Valpolicella and Bardolino.

Along with outstanding red wines, Zenato also produce white wines that are renowned for their clean and elegant fruit character.

Over the years Zenato have become one of the most respected family owned wineries in Italy and in 2004, at the London International Wine & Spirits Fair, they were voted among the Top Five Red Wine Producers in Italy.

Today, following in the footsteps of their late father, Alberto and Nadia form a well balanced partnership, using their talent and passion to continue their viticultural heritage.

Dezzani

Located in Cocconato d'Asti, Dezzani was founded in 1934 by Luigi Dezzani. His hard work and dedication to the promotion of Piedmontese wines was recognised when he was awarded the 'Cavaliere del Lavoro', Italy's highest honour for entrepreneurial excellence. The estate comprises 50 hectares situated in Langhe and Monferrato. Today, Luigi Dezzani's grandson and namesake carries on his legacy of producing quality classic Piedmontese wines. The Dezzani family have developed strong relationships with growers in the region, allowing them to pick the finest grapes from some of the best vineyards and act as a negotiant for some of the best estates in the various DOCs of Piedmont.

Vino e passione nelle Marche

Moncaro

Founded in 1964 and located in the beautiful Marche region, Moncaro is one of the largest co-operatives in Italy with 1,100 members who cultivate a total of 1,700 hectares of vineyards. Of the 1,700 hectares that make up the co-operative, all are controlled using integrated farming methods. 60 hectares are certified organic and a further 350 have EU certification for 'low environmental impact', making Moncaro one of the 'greenest' wineries in Italy.

The co-operative has three separate wineries situated in the principal viticultural areas of the Marche: Montecarotto, Camerano and Acquaviva.

This allows master winemaker Giuliano d'Ignazi and world famous consultant oenologist Riccardo Cottarella, to create wines which retain the individual characteristics of each area.

Leone de Castris

The Leone de Castris winery is based in Salice Salentino and is an intrinsic part of the history of wine-making in the Southern Italian region of Puglia.

The estate was founded in 1665 by Duke Oronzo, Earl of Lemos. After being enchanted by the landscape of Puglia he decided to sell all his properties in Spain, and dedicated himself to making great wine from the rich terroir of Salento.

He began by planting new vines, olive trees and wheat on the 5,000 hectares of property which spanned Salice, Guagnano, Veglie, Villa Baldassarri, Novoli and San Pancrazio.

"Five Roses", the now famous rosé made by Leone de Castris, was first produced in 1943, and was the first rosato to be bottled in Italy. Its name comes from a "contrada", belonging to the family, so called, because for several generations each de Castris had five children.

During the 1960s, the direction of the company was in the hands of Cavaliere del Lavoro Salvatore Leone de Castris, and thanks to his efforts the winery developed both locally and internationally.

The philosophy of continuous improvement is now driven on by his son, Piernicola Leone de Castris, who has been Managing Director since the late 1990s.

Leone de Castris have always been pioneers in spreading the richness of Salento's viticulture all over the world. They have 350 years of history looking towards the future.

Argiolas

Franco & Giuseppe Argiolas, along with their children, run one of Sardinia's finest wineries.

The renowned oenologist Professor Giacomo Tachis has been involved with the winery for over a decade and is responsible for creating Turriga, which is today considered to be one of Italy's best red wines. The Argiolas winery has always preferred to concentrate on indigenous Sardinian grape varieties, and they are responsible for a resurgence of interest in Bovale Sardo. The estate comprises 230 hectares and is located in Serdiana, near Cagliari.

Cusumano - Nadaria

From day one, the philosophy behind Cusumano has been to emphasise the importance of terroir.

Cusumano was established in 2000 when brothers Alberto and Diego took over from their father, who had been growing grapes for 40 years.

The estate comprised 140 hectares of prime vineyard locations throughout Sicily which, within recent years, has grown to 400 hectares.

In 2004, they expanded again with the acquisition of a new holding in San Giacomo, in the territory of Butera, to the south of the island.

The brothers have assembled a team that has a rich experience in viticulture and above all an absolute passion for winemaking. Because of their intimate knowledge of the Sicilian terroir, Diego and Alberto have been able to find prime vineyard locations throughout Sicily.

These vineyards allow maximum expression of not only indigenous Sicilian grape varieties but of international varieties that, according to Diego, evolve to take on their own Sicilian identity.

The Cusumanos have also invested heavily in technology, and since 2003 have been renovating the old cantina to create a state of the art winery built around the ancient baglio.
