Wine List

Introduction

We have great pleasure in welcoming you to our new wine list, which we have developed and refined to reflect changing times while honouring the classics!

We start by offering our carefully picked range of House Selections which provide a balanced cross section of the full list that follows. Within this the White and Red Wines are listed by style in three groups. We believe this reflects the way many of us now make our wine choices and will therefore assist you in making your selection!

Then follows our full wine list, including the wines from our house selections. Here we list White Wines, Rosés and Reds; with each we list the classic regions of France, followed by the rest of Europe and then the New World.

If you would like any assistance, please do not hesitate to ask a member of our senior staff.

More than anything else, we hope that you will experience genuine pleasure from the wines we have chosen.

We aim to offer an interesting and varied selection of wines by the glass,

Below is our current selection, all prices are for 175ml glass [125ml and 250ml are also available, Sparkling wines and Champagnes are served in 125ml glasses, as are dessert wines.

Red Bordeaux

Robert Parker opens the introduction to his authoritative and extremely useful book on the subject with "Bordeaux holds the paramount position in today's world of wine." Our attitude to Bordeaux wines is to buy good wine that is ready to drink now. Unfortunately, this sometimes means that it is also expensive, but silly prices just mean that one cannot drink them so often, and that they must be truly savoured. Nevertheless, by spending a great deal of time with several Masters of Wines and with careful buying over the years, we have produced a list of wines, which is broad, representative and above all ready to drink.

Burgundy & Beaujolais - Red Wines

Buying Burgundy can be a real challenge. One vineyard name can often be produced by tens or even hundreds of different producers of varying commitment and abilities. However it can also be a delight as, for many, fine Burgundian Pinot Noir is an almost unique pleasure.

Please do not overlook the three Beaujolais here listed. They are not thin and characterless as Beaujolais Nouveau can be — instead they are refined, elegant and an excellent accompaniment to a wide range of dishes.

300	Beaujolais-Villages, Domaine Passot-Collonge	2013	£28.00
304	Fleurie, Remy Passot	2015	£33.50
